Part 2—General duty

5—General duty

- (1) A person must in using or disposing of an agricultural chemical product, fertiliser or prescribed veterinary product take all reasonable and practicable measures to prevent or minimise—
 - (a) in the case of an agricultural chemical product—
 - (i) actual or potential contamination of land outside the target area that is not trivial, taking into account current or proposed land uses; or
 - (ii) actual or potential contamination of animals or plants on land outside the target area that is not trivial, taking into account the economic or ecological value of the animals or plants and the current or proposed land uses; or
 - (b) actual or potential harm to the health or safety of human beings (in the case of an agricultural chemical product, whether within or outside the target area) that is not trivial, taking into account current or proposed land uses; or
 - (c) other unintended actual or potential environmental harm (in the case of an agricultural chemical product, whether within or outside the target area) that is not trivial, taking into account current or proposed land uses.
- (2) For the purposes of subsection (1)(a)—
 - (a) land is contaminated if any soil, water or other environmental component of the land contains a residue of an agricultural chemical product; and
 - (b) an animal or plant is contaminated if the animal or plant or a product derived from the animal or plant contains a residue of an agricultural chemical product.
- (3) Without limiting the circumstances in which contamination will not be considered trivial, contamination will not be trivial if—
 - (a) in the case of contamination of a trade species animal or trade species plant with a residue of an agricultural chemical product in respect of which a maximum limit has been fixed in the MRL Standard—the residue is above that maximum limit;
 - (b) in the case of contamination of land with a residue of an agricultural chemical product in respect of which a maximum limit has been fixed in the MRL Standard—the residue in the soil, water or other environmental component of the land is such that it can reasonably be expected that a trade species animal kept on the land or a trade species plant grown on the land would be or become contaminated to the extent referred to in paragraph (a).
- (4) In determining what measures are required to be taken under subsection (1), regard is to be had, amongst other things, to—
 - (a) the nature of the product; and

- (b) in the case of a registered agricultural chemical product or registered veterinary chemical product, the terms of the approved label for containers for the product; and
 - (c) the terms of any permit issued in respect of the product; and
 - (d) the nature of the area surrounding the site where the product is used or disposed of; and
 - (e) the weather conditions at the time the product is used or disposed of and the forecast for the period following use or disposal; and
 - (f) whether any equipment used is appropriate and in good repair; and
 - (g) the financial implications of the various measures that might be taken as those implications relate to the class of persons using or disposing of the same or similar products in the same or similar circumstances; and
 - (h) the current state of technical knowledge and likelihood of successful application of the various measures that might be taken.
- (5) Failure to comply with the duty under this section does not of itself constitute an offence, but compliance with the duty may be enforced by the issuing of a compliance order.
- (6) This section operates in addition to, and does not limit or derogate from, the provisions of the Environment Protection Act 1993 or any other Act.
