- (1) In this section—

15 relevant question means a question of law and includes a question about how a judicial discretion should be exercised or whether a judicial discretion has been properly exercised.

- (2) A court by which a person has been, is being or is to be tried or sentenced for an indictable offence may reserve for consideration and determination by the Full Court a relevant question on an issue—

(a) antecedent to trial; or

(b) relevant to the trial or sentencing of the defendant,

25 and the court may (if necessary) stay the proceedings until the question has been determined by the Full Court.

- (3) Unless required to do so by the Full Court, a court must not reserve a question for consideration and determination by the Full Court if reservation of the question would unduly delay the trial or sentencing of the defendant.

- 30 (4) A court before which a person has been tried and acquitted of an offence must, on application by the Attorney-General or the Director of Public Prosecutions, reserve a question antecedent to the trial, or arising in the course of the trial, for consideration and determination by the Full Court.

- 35 (5) The Full Court may, on application under subsection (6), require a court to refer a relevant question to it for consideration and determination.

(6) An application for an order under subsection (5) may be made by—

(a) the Attorney-General or the Director of Public Prosecutions; or

(b) a person who—

(i) has applied unsuccessfully to the primary court to have the question referred for consideration and determination by the Full Court; and

(ii) has obtained the permission of the primary court or the Supreme Court to make the application.

(7) If a person is convicted, and a question relevant to the trial or sentencing is reserved for consideration and determination by the Full Court, the primary court or the Supreme Court may release the person on bail on conditions the court considers appropriate.
